OUR GREAT HISTORY

Many years ago, the first delivery kitchen was created - a Chuckwagon. "Cookie" ran the wagon as it was his job to keep the cowboys fed and was never far behind, starting early in the morning and ended late at night. One of the staples along the trail was cured meat. First, it began with jerky, but soon they learned how to smoke meats right on the trail, the beginnings of BBQ. Of course, the Native American Indians knew how to smoke meats and called it barbacoa.

Today we incorporate all the smartest technology to get the smoking just right to achieve the old west smoked meat flavor.

All of our meats are slow-smoked over our signature blend of three kinds of wood. Hickory, Cherry, and Apple woods each have their unique flavor but combined, they make up a taste sensation that is hard to match. Our pitmaster has perfected the art of slow smoking to make every meat tender, succulent, and full of that great traditional smokehouse flavor you've come to expect and love. Smoking the meats real slow keeps all the natural smoke flavor complementing with a generous coating of natural herbs and spices.

Our vegetables are prepared in the old fashion style of using fresh green beans, making mashed potatoes from what else - real potatoes, we peel and cook right here. Cornbread, yeast rolls all handcrafted and baked on-site every day. We are proud of our extra-thick and natural BBQ sauce; using real honey and tomatoes, slow cooking it for hours. Sunlight brews our two excellent teas, so you get all the best that mother nature has to offer; it takes longer; but we know it's better.

Thus the reason we are open short hours, keeping the food fresh the way it is meant to be. Best get there early as when we run out, that's all for the day!
