A diagnosis of pancreas cancer means you have a less than 15% chance of seeing the next year. Pancreas cancer is the only common cancer with a single-digit 5 year survival rate. Because of these dismal statistics, most pancreas cancer patients are silenced before they have a chance to tell anyone about the need for more research to find treatments for their disease. But for every patient, there is a passionate group of family members, physicians and researchers who want to fight to change these numbers. The Florida Pancreas Cancer Coalition Inc. is a group of survivors, family members and researchers who have united to raise money to support pancreas cancer research being conducted here in our home state of Florida.

All proceeds support local pancreas cancer research.
